TARGET: A BETTER TOMORROW

PRODUCTIVITY FOR PROGRESS

The American worker's productivity is still the highest in the world, according to Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson, but he points out an alarming trend. From 1965 to just a few months ago, our national productivity growth index dropped, well below that of competing nations.

During the same period Japan's productivity increased at a 13 per cent rate; the Netherlands' well over 10 per cent; France's, Germany's and Sweden's all in the neighborhood of 6 to 7 per cent.

Secretary Hodgson warns, "It won't take long for the rest of the world to catch up, and we'll find ourselves increasingly unable to compete for our share of the world's markets."

Recently the President established a National Commission on Productivity to find ways to stimulate productivity growth.

Labor and management must both understand that, while productivity gains are vital, they need not and indeed should not be obtained at the cost of human hardship.

However, the American worker must recognize the only way he can increase his real wages is through increased productivity.

We really do not have a choice between quantity and quality. We must have both or we'll have neither.

WINTER WOES by Pinson

A mighty smart driver was Huntington Swick,
He drove to his office on roads that were slick—
With icy winds blowing,
And drifts quickly growing,
He put on his tire chains—but quick!

PREVENT THOSE WINTER DRIVING WOES

The Safe Winter Driving League recommends that you stay home when the weather gets this bad. But if you do have to drive under severe snow and ice conditions, be sure your car is equipped with reinforced tire chains. They provide four to seven times the pulling ability of regular tires on snow and ice, according to test findings by the National Safety Council.
