Russian sailor loses arm and blames employer

A sailor from Kaliningrad, Viktor Boshko, said that he lost his arm and blamed his employer, who, according to him, did not provide timely treatment after receiving the injury. His story was published by the Telegram channel Mash.

Boshko said that on January 14, while working on the deck of a Dobroflot ship, he was pinned by a cable, which tore off a finger and crushed the tissue in his left hand. "For 10 days, as it turned out later, I was rotting alive, but the ship's doctor only gave me poultices and endless painkillers," said the 29-year-old man.

Instead of being taken to port, which he said would have taken several hours, he was kept on the floating base. He waited for five days while the fishing operation lasted, and another five days while the ship returned to Vladivostok. Then he was given the number of Dobroflot's chief doctor, but he said his arm was fine.

At the Nakhodka hospital, he was told that his brachial artery had ruptured. According to Boshko, no one from the company called him or apologized. On May 20, following complaints, a criminal case was opened. The man claims that he now lives on a disability pension.

Earlier, it was reported that a court in the Rostov region ordered the hospital management to pay 1.5 million rubles in compensation for moral damages to the family of an 11-year-old boy whose arm was amputated due to a medical error. The parents demanded 6 million and planned to spend the money on a modern bionic prosthesis. The boy lost his arm in 2019. At first, he broke his arm, they put a plaster cast on the open fracture and sent him home, the pain did not go away and after two days the plaster was loosened, and the parents were told that everything was "as it should be". Later, the arm began to turn blue, it turned out that the boy had gas gangrene and blood poisoning. He was put into an artificial coma and his arm was amputated, he underwent three operations.

The Ukrainian Armed Forces attacked the Moscow region twice in one day. What drones were used and where were they launched from?

Varvara Koshechkina (editor of the operational information department)

The Armed Forces of Ukraine (AFU) attempted to attack the Moscow region twice in one day using unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs). The first attempt was made on the night of May 6, the second became known in the evening of the same day. According to the Russian Ministry of Defense, air defense systems were in operation from 16:40 to 17:20 local time. With their help, two aircraft-type drones were destroyed.

According to residents of the nearby village of Novy Gorodok, the first explosion occurred at approximately 18:30 Moscow time. A few minutes later, another one thundered.

Information from citizens came during statements about the destruction of the UAV from officials.

Drones could have been launched from the Dnepropetrovsk region

The Telegram channel Mash, citing local residents, reported on the operation of air defense systems over the Moscow region cities of Shchyolkovo and Losino-Petrovskoye. It is also known that citizens living in Zhukovsky and Ramenskoye were warned of the air danger. The "Caution on UAVs" mode was introduced there.

According to the publication, the drones flying over the Moscow region were of the aircraft type and could be identified as Lyuty drones.

Mobile phone connection is interrupted, sounds similar to explosions are heard

The Shot Telegram channel, without disclosing its sources, reported that the two Ukrainian drones that officials had spoken about were destroyed over Noginsk and Shchyolkovo.

It is assumed that the UAVs were launched from the territory of the Dnipropetrovsk region of Ukraine. The distance between it and the Moscow region is more than a thousand kilometers.

It is specified that the drones were filled with striking elements - metal balls up to four millimeters in diameter.

Moscow airports introduce flight restrictions

On the evening of May 6, it was reported that restrictions on flights had been introduced at Zhukovsky Airport in Moscow. The arrival and departure of aircraft was suspended from 16:50 Moscow time. Moreover, earlier that day, the "Carpet" plan had been introduced there and at other capital airports, which is activated when dangerous aircraft appear in the sky. Such restrictions were applied due to a massive UAV attack on the capital.

From 18:19 local time, two more Moscow airports — Vnukovo and Domodedovo — introduced flight restrictions. This was reported by Rosaviatsiya press secretary Artem Korenyako on the Telegram channel.

The Ukrainian Armed Forces May Have Used New Tactics During the Raid on Moscow

On the night of May 6, the Ukrainian army made its first attempt to attack Moscow. According to Sobyenin, drones were flying toward the Russian capital from different directions. A total of 19 UAVs were destroyed.

The raids took place in several waves. At first, five drones were reported destroyed, then one, three, and ten. The wreckage of one of them fell in the area of Kashirskoye Highway.

Related materials:

The founder of the unmanned aviation training center, Corresponding Member of the Russian Engineering Academy, Maxim Kondratyev, in a conversation with aif.ru suggested that the Ukrainian Armed Forces had used a new tactical move.

"One unmanned complex flew over the Moscow Ring Road and was destroyed in the area of Kashirskoye Highway. There were few UAVs in this attack, most likely the enemy was testing a hypothesis, a new tactical move: will it fly or not with a small number of drones," the expert said.
